

Structure and Saliency of Israeli Adolescent Values Within the Text and Context of Judaism

ZECHARIA DOR-SHAV (DERSHOWITZ) is an ordained Rabbi (Rabbinical Seminary of America—Mesivta Rabbi Chaim Berlin) and has his Ph.D. from New York University (1966). For the past 23 years he has been at Bar Ilan University in the School of Education. He has also served a term there as Chairman of the School of Education. Prior to entering the field of college teaching he served as Principal of Hebrew Day Schools for ten years. He also served as Director of the Eliezer Stern Institute for Research and Advancement in Religious Education at Bar Ilan University from 1986 until 1991. He is a registered psychologist and a member of the Israel Psychological Association as well as the Israel Education Association. His doctoral dissertation was done under the direction of Professors Herman Witkin and Margaret Mead, entitled "Influences of Cultural Patterns on the Thinking of Children in Certain Ethnic Groups: A Study of the Effect of Jewish Sub-culture on the Field-Dependence-Independence Dimension of Cognition." His primary research interests are in cognitive processes and cultural differences, Jewish self-identity, and the development of empathy (particularly, empathy with the Jewish People). He has published in all of these fields, and has created several original instruments for these studies: Verbal Disembedding Test; Jewishness Rating Test (with Yaakov Rand); The Piagetian Scale; Test of Jewish Empathy (with Hana Yaoz). He has also published articles of "halakhic" interest.

NAVA MASLOVATY received her Ph.D. from the School of Education of Bar Ilan University in 1987, and is presently lecturer in the School of Education at Bar Ilan University, as well as being Program Director for in-service teacher training on Development of Moral Judgement and Behavior for the Ministry of Education and Culture in Israel. The recipient of the Schnitzer Prize for research in the field of Economics and Society, she was also a coordinator of the committee for planning the Development of Disadvantaged Pupils in the educational system for the Ministry of Education and Culture at Tel Aviv University.
